Anchoring of products:

It is the customer's responsibility that the designated place for placement of the product (usually safes/cabinets) is free from obstacles to drilling, bolting or other attachment of the product. Obstacles can be equipment's in the floor or the wall such as heating, water, electricity and drainage supply pipes etc. The obstacle can also consist of access to other functions which can then be limited by the location of the product. This applies regardless of whether the product is to be attached to the floor or the wall.

It is not the carrier's responsibility, neither Robur's staff or other performing personnel's to find out the property's conditions for placement or attachment of the product. If damage occurs during such work in the property due to incorrect placement of the product, it is the customer's full responsibility.
